Hello, we are Sooty and Ginger, we are both senior gentlemen of a certain age looking for a quiet, comfortable environment to see out our remaining years, we get on well with each other but would not really like the company of other cats. We both have a good appetite and love to roam in the garden. The vet says we are both in good health for our age.

My name is Mocha.... and mocha in colour, I am a shy 5 year old neutered male cat. I need plenty of love on a one to one basis to help me regain my confidence, maybe a quiet atmosphere with adults only.

Hello, my name is... Smoky, I am an 8 year old neutered, male, tabby and white cat. I am super friendly and enjoy cuddles, strokes and food. I love the company of children but I would prefer to be in a house with no other cats. I am very communicative with lots of meows and chirrups and if that does not get your attention then a kindly 'tap' with my paw normally does the trick.

Hi, my name is... Bella, I am a beautiful 8 year old neutered strawberry blonde lady cat. I am very friendly and enjoy hugs and cuddles. I am sure to fit in well with a family but the jury is 'still out' if I would be happy with another cat.

My magical return to days of The Sorcerer

THERE'S a popular myth that Gilbert and Sullivan only appeal to an older audience, but I first became a devotee as a teenage Cambridge undergraduate.

As a child, I'd been a chorister, singing 10 services (or shows, as I thought of them) a week, and then, almost by accident, had played a good part in a West End play.

A seasoned old pro by the age of 12, I already knew that I wanted to go on the stage, but I was still unsure, when I arrived in Cambridge aged 18, whether I wanted that to be a dramatic or an operatic stage.

I very quickly discovered that Gilbert and Sullivan triumphantly and simultaneously satisfied both cravings – proper music that is as rewarding to sing as the grand opera it so wittily parodies and sophisticated light comedy that is as delightful to play as Oscar Wilde, Bernard Shaw or Noel Coward.

I joined the university's G&S society where Nick Hytner (now Sir Nicholas Hytner, artistic director of the National Theatre) was already an enthusiastic member and my first role was Nanki Poo in The Mikado, directed by a young Griff Rhys Jones.

During my three years as an undergraduate, I wangled my way into some 40 productions of plays and operas, 10 of which were by Gilbert and Sullivan.

Gilbert and Sullivan's magical opera The Sorcerer is on its way to Cambridge. Its star, SIMON BUTTERISS, shares his memories of part performances with Cambridge University's G&S Society and why he still loves their timeless masterpieces.

As for academic work, I was reading English and kept my head above water by writing essays about the plays I'd been in. I happily agreed, for example, to play Racine's tragic queen, Phèdre, in order to have something to write about in my tragedy paper and even managed to persuade a bemused English faculty to allow me to write my finals dissertation on Verdi's operas.

In 1977, the centenary year of Gilbert and Sullivan's first full-length comic opera, The Sorcerer, I appeared in a May Week production of this hilarious, drug-induced overturning of middle class morality, directed by Michael McCaffery, (a G&S devotee who nevertheless went on to direct Wagner's Ring at Bayreuth.)

Just as the West End quaked, in those days, at the pen of Harold Hobson in the Sunday Times, so in the Cambridge of the 1970s, Deryck Harvey, the theatre critic of the Cambridge Evening News (as it then was) could make or break a university production. A good review from him and your Cambridge career was made, and I was accorded the coveted honour of being interviewed by him for the paper.

'G&S star aims at opera', the headline brazenly announced and the accompanying photograph showed an effete, suspiciously blond creature swathed in liberty silk and surrounded by casually arranged G&S LPs.

However embarrassing it is for me to look at now, that article reminds me of the sheer range of theatre and music in which one was able – and encouraged – to engage at Cambridge, and in particular, how the delights of playing Gilbert and Sullivan fed my dual appetite as actor and singer, and made it possible for me never to have to make that impossible choice to be merely one or the other.

So although the RSC has been rash enough to let me play roles for them and La Scala to let me sing roles for them, my passion for G&S remains.

I recently made a television series about them – Gilbert and Sullivan: A Motley Pair (to be screened later in the year on Sky Arts) and we filmed a lot of it in Cambridge. The enthusiastic involvement of the university G&S society, whose lively performances, at May Balls and in punts on the river, feature in the series, demonstrates that Gilbert's razor sharp satire and Sullivan's melodic invention still have as magnetic an attraction as ever, for audiences of all ages.

The series also features the work of the country's leading operetta company, Opera della Luna, and follows the preparations, rehearsals and opening performances of their clever and very funny new production of The Sorcerer, set, appropriately enough, in the 1970s, when love potions were hallucinogenic and I wasn't the only one to make dodgy fashion choices.

It's a comparatively rare outing for this delightful piece, which hasn't been seen on tour since the old D'Oyly Carte occasionally slipped in a performance in the 1970s. I'm delighted to be in it, playing the eponymous sorcerer, and particularly delighted that we'll be bringing it to the Cambridge Arts Theatre.

It feels like coming home.

Original Drifters member joins Motown on tour

MOTOWN On Tour at Cambridge Corn Exchange features original Drifters member Roy G Hemmings.

It is a celebration of 50 years of Motown, with hits by The Supremes, Martha Reeves and the Vandellas, The Four Tops, The Temptations, Marvin Gaye, The Jacksons, Stevie Wonder, Lionel Ritchie and more.

Front man Roy G Hemmings, the longest serving member of The Drifters, is joined by The Love Supremes as well as The Tops & Tempts and the seven-piece Dictionary of Soul band performing such classic tracks as Baby Love, Dancing In The Street, My Girl, I Can't Help Myself, I Heard It Through The Grapevine, Reach Out and many more, as they re-live the thumping beat of the Motown dream.

The show starts at 7.30pm tomorrow with tickets at £22.50, £19.50.

Acclaimed composers lends baton to charity's fundraiser

AN EVENING of prose, poetry and music, featuring acclaimed musician John Cameron, will be performed to raise money for a Cambridge charity.

Camread, based in Chesterton, celebrates its 30th year of service to more than 400 blind and visually impaired people in Cambridgeshire in 2010.

To kick off the celebrations, the charity is hosting a fundraising concert at the Lee Hall at Wolfson College, Cambridge, tomorrow.

The concert will feature eminent composer, arranger and conductor John Cameron, among a host of other talents.

Educated at Corpus Christi College, John is perhaps best known for his orchestration of Les Misérables.

He has recorded and worked as musical director and arranger with top performers from José Carreras to Ella Fitzgerald.

His credits include many film scores such as A Touch of Class and numerous play and television scores.

BY SUZAN UZEL

Camread is also pleased to welcome a wealth of local talent, including soprano Jennifer Thompson, Jane Bower and the Shefford Drama Circle for a celebratory evening of words and music.

The event will feature a raffle to raise vital funds for the charity.

Sally Nott, fundraiser and administrator for Camread, said: "It will be a mixture of local and national talent, some of which is professional and some of which is good-quality amateur.

"We don't get any funding from anyone.

"We have to raise everything ourselves, including running costs, our salaries and all the work we do for our blind and visually impaired clients.

"Any money we raise is primarily for the benefit of our clients and all our services we give completely free of charge."

The charity produces an audio magazine called Cam-Mag and provides a visiting service to clients, in their homes, to read to them and carry out administrative work.

The organisation also makes recordings for the blind and visually impaired to listen to.

Ms Nott added: "The concert not only is a celebration of 30 years of service but it is also a very good way of raising much-needed funding for the organisation."

The concert starts at 7.15pm.

Tickets are £10, or £8 for visually impaired persons, and are available by contacting Camread on (01223) 424220 or 07758 078910.

The evening is being sponsored by Cambridge Consultants.

The charity also welcomes sponsorship from businesses for issues of Cam-Mag.

Talent: acclaimed musician John Cameron will perform for Camread

The big film

I LOVE YOU PHILLIP MORRIS (15, 95 mins) Comedy. Jim Carrey, Ewan McGregor, Leslie Mann, Rodrigo Santoro. Directors: Glenn Ficarra, John Requa.

JIM Carrey delivers his best dramatic performance since Eternal Sunshine Of The Spotless Mind in this improbable and utterly incredible true story.

Based on a novel by investigative reporter Steve McVicker, the film charts the romance of two prison inmates and their subsequent journey of self-discovery on both sides of the bars.

Writer-directors Glenn Ficarra and John Requa (Bad Santa) strike a pleasing balance between laughter and soul-searching in this oddball comedy.

Crucially, Carrey generates smouldering screen chemistry with co-star Ewan McGregor, convincing us that undying love and a daredevil spirit can overcome anything.

Truth is far, far stranger than this entertaining fiction, which takes dramatic licence with dialogue and abbreviates the exploits of the white collar criminal during the 1980s and 1990s, who escaped incarceration four times and has paid a terrible price for humiliating the US prison service.

The real Stephen Russell was handed a 144-year sentence and must spend 23 hours every day confined to his cell without visitors. That's no laughing matter.

When we first meet Stephen (Carrey), he is a happily married police officer with a beautiful wife, Debbie (Mann), and young daughter. However, the family man has a secret: he is gay.

When he can no longer keep the secret, Stephen comes out to his wife and moves to Florida with boyfriend Jimmy (Santoro).

The cost of living fabulously is perilously high, and Stephen breaks the law to finance his lavish tastes. The authorities eventually catch up with the swindler and sentence him to time in prison where he meets softly spoken Phillip Morris (McGregor).

The attraction is instant, and Stephen schemes to become his lover's cellmate.

When he finally gains parole, Stephen poses as a lawyer to get Phillip out of prison early, but once they are united on the outside, the former conman struggles to mend his ways.

Phillip lands a high-profile position as chief financial officer at a large corporation, where the temptation to embezzle is irresistible.

When the police invariably come knocking him, Phillip is distraught: "I don't care about the money," he pleads, "All I want is you. I just want us to be together."

I Love You Phillip Morris is sweet, sexy and at times hilarious, posing the obvious dilemma: Can a gay conman go straight?

Carrey's rapport with McGregor, sporting a Southern accent and cropped blond hair, anchors the picture.

Ficarra and Requa don't shy away from the physicality of Stephen and Phillip's relationship, creating a wonderfully odd couple. We root for the characters, even though we know everything Phillip says and does is for his own gain.

Urban gardens can keep out noise and pollution

People with urban gardens can make a real contribution to helping the environment, but many of them don't realise it, according to a new survey.

Some 46 per cent of the 1,000 people questioned claimed that urban pollution in their immediate environment – including noise problems, traffic fumes and carbon footprint – are among the most important issues they face as city dwellers, yet 21 per cent said they don't know where to start when tackling the problem.

With this in mind, garden designer Charlie Dimmock has joined a campaign to encourage urbanites to introduce eco measures into their gardens to help reduce the carbon footprint.

City dwellers are craving environmentally sound lives, but don't have the knowledge to change things for the better, the Ronséal survey found.

Dimmock says: "People with small urban gardens think they can't make a difference to the wildlife, but they can because they can create corridors to larger areas such as parks, greens and railway cuttings.

by Hannah Stephenson

"Building a wooden compost area, establishing a recycling space or growing your own herbs in a window box, are all simple steps that can make a real difference."

If you have a spring clean of your garden, leave an area overgrown, to act as a shelter for hedgehogs and insects, says Dimmock, who is supporting Urban Gardens Week, which began on Monday.

"A lot of people hate ivy, but many urban gardens benefit from having fences covered with ivy, which is a really good wildlife plant because it flowers late in the season, has a high nectar content and helps to keep down noise pollution.

"It also makes a good nesting site for birds."

Dimmock also advises urban gardeners to plant mixed hedges to keep out noise and pollution and attract wildlife. Ideal varieties include hawthorn, yew and field maple, which will absorb some of the noise.

Another great shrub in the urban garden is ceanothus, whose purple flowers are high in nectar and rich in colour and it can be clipped back easily.

Hardy annuals also provide a good burst of colour and when they have finished can then be thrown onto the compost heap. Direct-sow love-in-a-mist, poppies, poached egg plants and cornflowers for a beautiful display.

If you have a small area, use the vertical space by growing climbing veg such as runner beans up a fence, raspberries or spineless blackberries, which can grow to a reasonable height and provide shelter and food for birds and insects.

If you live in an area where traffic fumes and dust are a problem, plant a variety of evergreens to absorb the dirt. They may look a little dusty on the road side but they will withstand a lot of grime and act as a filter and a windbreak. Aucuba, eleagnus and butcher's broom are extremely robust and make solid hedges, and variegated holly can also be used.

"Only evergreens with shiny, thick leaves will put up with a lot, because the leaves are protected with a thick cuticle."

Scented plants can also offset the smell of traffic fumes. Try growing night-scented stocks or old fashioned nicotiana in a pot for evening scent.

Trachelospermum jasminoides, commonly known as star jasmine, a woody, evergreen climber with rich, dark green leaves which turn bronze in winter, produces hugely fragrant white flowers from mid to late summer.

BEST OF THE BUNCH Muscari (Grape hyacinth)

These pint-sized bulbs in shades of blue and white produce their narrow, leafless flower stems in early spring before the dense spikes of flowers appear.

Types such as M. azureum, which has pale blue flowers with conical heads, look lovely in a rock garden or at the front of a border. For me, they are best planted in abundance in terracotta pots, which act as a perfect foil for the deep blue varieties such as M. armeniacum and M. neglectum. Also, pots prevent the bulbs from taking over an area, as some varieties can be invasive.

Getting Leaf-y

Nissan's UK-built electric car

MOTOR giant Nissan is to build its new electric car in Sunderland, it was announced last week.

Production of the Nissan Leaf will begin in 2013 and forms part of a £420 million investment in electric cars by the Japanese firm.

The manufacturer said the Leaf would be the world's first affordable mass-produced zero emission car and around 50,000 a year will roll off the Sunderland production line.

The investment will be supported by a £20.7 million Government grant and a proposed finance package from the European Investment Bank of up to 220 million euros (£197.3 million).

The announcement was welcomed by Business Secretary Lord Mandelson.

"This investment is a fantastic vote of confidence in the Sunderland plant and its excellent workforce," he said.

"The automotive sector is of key importance to the UK. It supports R&D, technological innovation, skills and a supply chain that's a mainstay of the wider manufacturing sector."

"Today's news from Nissan, with support from Government, shows that by working together we can achieve our aim of making the UK a world-leader in ultra-low carbon vehicles."

Andy Palmer, senior vice-president at Nissan, added: "The world is at the dawn of a new era in automotive transport."

"Nissan LEAF, which will go on sale later this year, is a five-seater hatchback that offers the same space, practicality and performance of a similar car in its class – minus the tailpipe emissions.

Inside: Futuristic – and then some.

Sunderland has been widely seen as the favourite for European production of the Leaf since the announcement last summer that Nissan's electric car battery would be sited next to the present factory.

The company has not specified how much the car will cost, saying only that it will be competitive with similar-sized cars with conventional engines.

Professor Stephen Glaister, director of the RAC Foundation, said: "Today's news shows that the major manufacturers are serious about making green vehicles available to the mass market. What's even better is that a lot of the skills necessary to do this will be here in the UK."

Professor Edmund King, AA president, said: "In the future we will have a mix of lower carbon vehicles from more fuel efficient combustion engines, through to electric cars, plug-in hybrids and hydrogen fuel cell vehicles."

Award-winning green car guide, TheGreenCar Website.co.uk, has warmly received the news.

"UK consumers are among the most open-minded and prepared to make the switch to electric," explains the website's editor, Faye Sunderland. "With the Government ploughing in investment into the sector, the UK is on target to be at the forefront of an electric car revolution and the LEAF should prove a key model which will pull us towards that vision."

Enjoy a 10% discount off Yamaha apparel at Allins

YAMAHA is offering its customers the opportunity to claim a 10 per cent discount off all Yamaha genuine apparel and accessories until the end of the month, throughout its network of authorised Yamaha dealers and Lifestyle Centres.

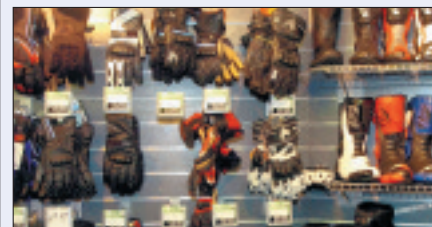

To take advantage of this fantastic offer, simply log on to www.yamaha-motor.co.uk, download and print off the 10 per cent discount voucher, then get down to your nearest authorised Yamaha dealer or Lifestyle Centre. You can then claim your 10 per cent discount on RRP, when you spend £50 or more on Yamaha genuine apparel and accessories in one transaction.

The best bit though, is that once you have redeemed your voucher, you can go online and print another one, meaning you can use as many vouchers as you like during the campaign (only one voucher redeemable per transaction).

So, if you're in need of some new riding gear, or you fancy splashing out on an accessory for your pride and joy, go online now to download your 10 per cent discount voucher!

Skoda heralds one Superb estate

THERE aren't many models that would count their luggage bay as a standout feature.

Plenty have big boots that are worth a mention and might even swing the buying decisions of those with a lot of possessions to carry, but very few would actively divert interested parties around to the back entrance as an opening gambit.

The Skoda Superb would. It's not that the car is deficient in other areas but in saloon guise, it does have a rear end of which it can be proud. Capable of opening like a hatchback or a saloon, the car brings real extra practicality to the party and provides a valuable means of differentiation in a crowded marketplace. All of which might give the Skoda Superb Estate a bit of a problem. This model is exactly the same as the standard Superb but without the party-piece boot.

Skoda might be middle ranking star in the automotive firmament but it's backed by the supernova that is the Volkswagen Group and that's where the Superb Estate gets its reassuringly modern engine range. It's the same line-up as in the Superb saloon, starting with the 124bhp 1.4-litre TSI unit which is followed by the 160bhp 1.8 TSI. Both of these are turbocharged petrol engines but the range-topper is a normally-aspirated 3.6-litre V6 with four-wheel-drive and the DSG twin clutch gearbox fitted as standard.

Given that the appeal of the Superb is centred around low costs and value, the diesel engines should be popular. The 105bhp 1.9-litre TDI is looking a little elderly these days but it's still a solid entry-level unit. A much better bet is one of the 2.0-litre TDI common-rail diesels. These come in 140 and 170bhp guises, with the latter churning out a full 350Nm or torque.

The Estate version of the Superb might not have the clever tailgate arrangement of the saloon model but beneath its conventional lifting hatch is a luggage area of epic proportions. Volvo V70, Audi A6 Avant, BMW 5 Series Touring: these are big cars but they can't equal the capacity of this Skoda. There's 633 litres of room with all of the seats in place and when they're folded, that figure rises to 1,865 litres – larger than some studio flats.

Away from its vast load Area, the Superb majors in robust build quality and unfussy design. It's short bonnet and high roofline means it isn't as sleek in profile as some estate models but the looks aren't going to offend anyone. Inside, the cabin is as comfortable for a family of four as you'll find this side of a luxury saloon. Rear legroom is sufficient for even the gangliest offspring to stretch their legs. The quality of the fixtures and fittings is as good as anything Volkswagen has to offer and, as a result, better than in almost all the Superb's direct rivals.

There are lots of 4x4s and MPVs to tempt family car buyers at the moment but there's life in the old estate car yet. Skoda's Superb Estate might not have the fancy boot opening that the brand innovated for the saloon version but its luggage-carrying potential is vast and the rest of the package stacks up very well too.

Good looking: And Skoda's Superb Estate is a deft runner too.

Well worth a test drive: The new Skoda Superb Estate.
